

Open Access

Open Access stands for free access at no charge to scientific publications and data in the internet. The goal is to create quick access to scientific works, publications and data, so that interested individuals can read the entire texts, search within them, cite them, and use them in any legal manner, without financial, legal or technical barriers apart from those connected with internet access itself.

Holzhausen Scientific Publishing is committed to the concept of the maximisation of the dissemination of scientific information and supports the policy of Open Access. For this reason scientific publications of the press will be digitally published as much as possible, and made freely available taking into account legal and commercial contingencies.

For further details see "Scientific Publications"

Tyche OPEN ACCESS-Journal